Remembrance & Thanksgiving

By Alex Flores, LNC Region 1 Alternative & AZLP Secretary

Every year, elementary school children create paper turkeys and dress up as Pilgrims and Indians to recreate the original Thanksgiving feast. It is portrayed as a great celebration between settlers from the Mayflower, who established Plymouth Colony, and friendly Native Americans from the Wampanoag tribe. The quaint retelling of the first Thanksgiving feast was perpetuated by Abraham Lincoln, whose proclamation on Oct. 3, 1863, made the last Thursday in November "a day of Thanksgiving and Praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the Heavens" for "blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies," and a peaceful end to the Civil War.

For many Native Americans, though, Thanksgiving is not synonymous with blessings and praise. Rather, the day is a reminder of a dark history that is rarely told in its entirety. "Is Thanksgiving an innocent celebration or are there some undertones that need to be addressed?" Ronald Trosper, professor of American Indian studies at the University of Arizona, asks.

"When Indians harvested, the thanks went to the land and the beings that provided themselves as food. That's a very fundamental indigenous belief, that we thank those beings that support our livelihood," Trosper said. "Then at dinner there was no prayer, they just started eating. They already thanked the land when they harvested. And they did not thank the Lord for providing the food, because the food came from the land."

"But Native Americans who have been raised in a family that's more aware probably have parents who have explained the real history behind Thanksgiving and said it's nice to celebrate the harvest in the fall. We have to realize that Thanksgiving has negative overtones, and that it denies there was so much taken away from Indians, because it's a very happy celebration. It looks like the Indians and the settlers were friends, but that's a denial of what the reality was."

This year, Consider taking another look at American history and the many varied Native American cultures all across the United States. Examine relationships, traditions, customs, and beliefs.

Since 1970, Native Americans have gathered at noon on Cole's Hill in Plymouth, Massachusetts to commemorate a National Day of Mourning on the US Thanksgiving Holiday. Many Native Americans don't celebrate the arrival of the Pilgrims and other European settlers. The organizers of this observance, United American Indians of New England (UAIINE) consider Thanksgiving Day as a continued reminder of the genocide and suffering of Native American People. To them, Thanksgiving Day is a reminder of the genocide of millions of their people, the theft of their lands, and the relentless assault on their culture. Participants in National Day of

AZLP 2022 CONVENTION

LIBERTY OASIS

Mourning honor Native ancestors and the struggles of Native Peoples to survive today. It is a day of remembrance and spiritual connection as well as a protest of the racism and oppression which Native Americans continue to experience today.

The Libertarian Party Statement of Principles says "we hold that all individuals have the right to exercise sole dominion over their own lives, and have the right to live in whatever manner they choose, so long as they do not forcibly interfere with the equal right of others to live in whatever manner they choose."

Whether you choose solemn remembrance or giving thanks, it is worth taking the time to learn and understand the history. We can find better ways to honor our ancestors and our history, forego the mistakes of the past, and hold true to our principles as libertarians.

AZLP Spotlight

Homefront Battle Buddies

By Lauren Snyder

Homefront Battle Buddies is a newly formed registered nonprofit organization located here in Arizona. Homefront Battle Buddies (HBB) was started by Adam Kokesh, US Marine Corps combat veteran and anti-war activist.

Like many, Adam was still in high school when he enlisted in the USMC at the age of 17. In 2004, he was sent to fight in the Iraq War which eventually inspired him to join the anti-war advocacy group, Iraq Veterans Against the War. He quickly became a national figure and used this status to continue to protest with the goal of drawing attention to the atrocities of war as well as highlighting government overreach and infringements on Constitutional rights. Adam has since gone on to host a radio show, podcast, wrote and self-published his book FREEDOM!; he has also run for Congress with an endorsement from Ron Paul, and ran for Presidential candidate at the 2020 Libertarian National Convention.

Adam's newest venture has been establishing Homefront Battle Buddies - "A community of veterans helping veterans in all the ways government failed us". The HBB Board of Directors is comprised of 6 Veterans who are all working hard to support homeless Veterans, provide alternative therapies, to help with consultations regarding benefits and other various services.

The Intern/Residency Program, spearheaded by HBB Vice Chair, Ed Vallejo, is a program that's geared towards providing a safe place for newly separated veterans who are looking for an alternative to just "going home" after serving. All veterans are welcome to apply, despite whatever circumstances may have lead them to HBB.

Located in the Ash Fork area of Arizona, the HBB Residency Program offers the freedom of safely living off-grid while offering help to those that may be struggling with any of the numerous issues veterans face. Whether it's someone trying to re-adjust to civilian life after serving, to work on their mental or physical health, or simply looking for camaraderie - the folks at Homefront Battle Buddies want to do as much as they can.

The facility itself is still in the development phase and training will be provided for anyone applicants that are able to help with construction.

If you'd like to apply for a residency, donate, volunteer to help or simply learn more about Homefront Battle Buddies, visit <https://homefrontbattlebuddies.com> for more information!

County Updates

Pima County

By Dru Heaton

PCLP Chair

In October, we were privileged to hear a presentation delivered by Libertarian Diane McBride on the psychology of totalitarianism. Her thoughtful delivery included an admonishment for us as Libertarians to model non-violent communication to those with whom we disagree. We are pleased to learn that she will be part of our upcoming state convention workshop opportunities. The local Libertarian Headquarters continues to serve as a resource for those resisting statist medical fascism as the city and county elected officials have enacted policies to discriminate against the individual rights of their residents.
